Nardeen thrives on tackling challenging legal issues and navigating complex cases with precision and insight. Whether managing high-stakes litigation or guiding clients through intricate regulatory challenges, her keen critical thinking skills enable her to approach each unique issue strategically, identifying innovative solutions and crafting compelling arguments.

Her practice spans a multidisciplinary set of industries and legal areas, including consumer products, deceptive advertising, longevity and healthspan, AI and emerging technologies, and other highly regulated sectors. Nardeen works closely with cross-functional teams to guide companies through complex legal and regulatory landscapes, including matters involving FTC and FDA regulatory strategy, marketing and advertising, product development and compliance, and issues affecting consumer-facing products and services.

In addition to her regulatory work, Nardeen supports clients across a broad range of enforcement and litigation contexts. Her experience includes assisting with government and internal investigations and matters involving the False Claims Act (FCA), Anti-Kickback Statute, Foreign Agents Registration Act (FARA), and the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), as well as complex commercial disputes, patent litigation, product liability and product-related challenges, class actions, and issues involving antitrust, competition, and mass tort exposure. She also works with individuals and corporations navigating inquiries by the Department of Justice and other enforcement authorities.

Across all areas of her practice, Nardeen brings a detail-oriented, forward-thinking approach that helps organizations operate confidently, mitigate risk, resolve disputes effectively, and meet the demands of rapidly evolving industries.
